Highlands Project presents their new album 'Keepin' On 'at the Teatre Principal in Palma. The Mallorcan band publishes their new album and presents it in the big room of the theater.

On Tuesday, February 9, 2021 at 7:00 p.m. the Mallorcan band Highlands Project presents their new album 'Keepin' On 'with the entire line-up in the main hall of the Teatre Principal in Palma.

The Highlands Project collective was created in 2013 by the Mallorcan composer and keyboardist Sergio Llopis. The jazz band is one of the formations with the most projection within the jazz scene of the Balearic Islands. They have performed on various occasions in Russia, Portugal and at the Menorca and Alcúdia jazz festivals, among others.

His previous album 'Voiceover Vol.1', a collaboration with different artists from the Balearic Islands, was hailed as one of the best jazz albums of the year by Enderrock magazine. Now, they are back with a new eight-track album of their own entitled 'Keepin' On '.

The band is formed by Sergio Llopis on keyboards; Guillem Nadal on the trumpet; Thomas Fontin on sax; Xema Borràs on trombone; Joan Colom on guitar; Jordi Tugores on guitar; Juanjo Amengual on bass; Teo Salvà, drums and Rogerio Santos, percussion. For the live performances of this new album, the band has a tenth member of the keyboard section, Gori Matas.

Highlands Project is a young group that has its hallmark in the fusion of various styles such as jazz, soul, funk and rhythm & blues. Until now, the group had released three albums: 'Suspir', 'Skalanes' and 'Live at Alquimia Records'. Their second album, 'Skalanes', was placed in a single week as the second best-selling jazz album in Spain.

Tickets are on sale on the Teatre Principal de Palma website:
